Transparent Environmental Footprints

To let you easily compare the lifecycle analyses and environmental impacts of different products, we have committed ourselves to total product transparency. We therefore use environmental product declarations (EPDs) to openly communicate the environmental footprints of our engineered wood products.

Sustainability and Quality

All of our products deliver excellent value for money and are extremely eco-friendly. KRONOTEX laminate floors meet the highest expectations with regard to quality and environmental compatibility in every respect: from the exclusive use of raw materials from sustainably managed forests, across closely monitored manufacture, to use and ultimate disposal.

For the Sake of the Environment: EPDs

We are issued EPDs by Germany's Institute for Construction and Environment (IBU), which developed them in close collaboration with German construction and environmental authorities in line with international standardisation procedures.

Healthy Living

More and more people, and especially young families, are opting for a sustainable lifestyle. When deciding which flooring to buy, they naturally ask questions like, are they manufactured in an environmentally sound manner? Do they contain any objectionable substances? Are they recyclable? The trend is clear: environmentally aware consumers are increasingly choosing to install modern, eco-friendly laminate floors.

The Future of Living

Green buildings, which are these houses of the future, are characterised by highly efficient use of resources such as energy, water and materials. One very important requirement is the use of eco-friendly, completely healthy laminate floors. Like those made by SWISS KRONO TEX GmbH & Co. KG.

Laminate Floors: Inspired By Nature

Innovative KRONOTEX laminate floors are as fascinating and diverse as nature itself. And there is plenty to choose from, ranging from perfectly replicated wood grain to authentic stone structures. Ten collections and 185 decors ensure that users get the best possible laminate floor for every setting and requirement. KRONOTEX laminate floors are of course available with both high-gloss surfaces, wood structures with a shine effect and matt surfaces with an oiled look – and these are just a few examples of many. All of the collections are rounded off by a rich selection of accessories such as skirting boards and corners and acoustically insulating underlays. For details, please visit www.kronotex.com.

Made in Germany

KRONOTEX is an independent profit centre which is successfully operated by SWISS KRONO TEX GmbH & Co. KG at the Heiligengrabe, Germany site of the globally active SWISS KRONO GROUP.

KRONOTEX Guarantees More

KRONOTEX product warranties considerably exceed the legally required minimum. We also guarantee the abrasion resistance of KRONOTEX laminate floors – when they are installed in private homes, even for as long as 30 years.

The Benefits of Laminate Flooring

- + KRONOTEX-laminate flooring mainly consists of wood, a renewable raw material, from sustainably managed forests.
- + Laminate floors are ideal for children's bedrooms, as they don't contain any plasticisers (phthalates). The German consumer magazine Ökotest even explicitly recommends them.
- + KRONOTEX laminate floors come with a warranty that is good for up to 30 years.
- + Laminate flooring involves floating installation, in other words without nailing or gluing. This means no adhesive residues.
- + All KRONOTEX laminate floors have tongue-and-groove edges for easy snap-together installation.
- + Thanks to innovative printing and in-register embossing technologies, the surfaces of KRONOTEX laminate floors look and feel remarkably like real wood grain and stone.
- + At the end of the product lifecycle, laminate flooring can be easily disposed of or burnt as fuel to release and use the energy it contains.
- + SWISS KRONO itself derives heat from production scrap.
- + KRONOTEX laminate flooring = quality made in Germany
